Poetical.

"JESUS WEPT." BY DR. THOMAS J. MANABAN I am thinking of the Savior Who sorrowfully wept Over the tout at Bethany,

Where Mary's brother's slept

Who called unto the sleeper With His life-inspiring breath, And Lazarus came quickly From the icy arms of death. I am thinking of the Savior,
So merciful and mild,
Who broke the deathly slumbers
Of the centurion's fair child:
Who called from death's embraces
The stricken son of Nain,
And the widow clasp'd her only child
In blooming health again.

I am thinking of the Savior Who drained His richest rei That we may beforgiven Of all our girevous sins. On Calvary's rugged mountain Our great Redeemer died, White rivers of salvation Ran from His bands and side.

Three hours upon the bloody cross The Lord of glory hung.

And there with pain and sorrow
The Lordb of God was sting; And the occuses and cruel pharisees Looked on linn with disbain, They wagged their heads and mock'd. Him And triumph'd in His pain,

I am thinking of the Savior Who wept for you and I. Who wave away His precious life That we may never die. Who kindly lengthens out our days, And offers us His love, That we may serre Him in this life, And tive with Him above. Now, tell me, gentle lady, Dost thus think of the Savior, Who cares so much for thee; Who guarded thee in childhood, And guided thee in youth;
